

THE 'NITED CLOCKWORK POSTAL SERVICE NEWS-LETTER
APRIL 1, 18xx
Volume 1, Issue 8

I GIVE UP

After talking to a porpoise the other night (have you ever on purpose posed questions to a porpoise? If not, perhaps paling with a porpoise might present such a purpose!), I have chosen to hang up my stamps and satchel. It has been a grand thing to serve all of you over these past seven years – almost eight. Postage and I are moving to pastures that I hope will be greener. And, as all light contains a bit of green in it – and we are moving through Spring – it would be hard for them to be less green. Where'er you go, and whate'er you do, please do not forget the power of dolphins. Or the sea. Or sand. Sand can get into the darndest places. And it is heck on gears. Thank you. ~

WORK HALTED

The UCPS office in Port Babbage has stopped serving the public. It is hard to serve the public when the office is under twelve feet of water, after all.

If you wish to have mail sent through the office, please feel free to swim down and drop your letter off. Letters written on stone tablets seem to work best for this. The weight helps you descend faster. Also, no inks to run or paper to get soggy.

The extra weight also means letters cost more to send! That means more money for me!~ fin

UCPS SEEKS WORKERS

I am looking to build up my workers at the UCPS. These workers would work at the UCPS Office in New Babbage at set times during the week.

These workers would answer questions about the office. We would also discuss ways to improve mail service for the Steamlands.

As part of the mail service, my Ghost would also help workers learn scripting (if needed). Clockworks only, please – that work well under the water. Thank you! ~ fin

Sanc'chree Notes

Books And Crisis

On April 23, the Sanc'chree will debut Nika Thought-werk's next book in honor of Riven Homewood. If you wish to also debut a book on this day – or if you have questions - please reach out to N. Thought-werk and ask.

In the near future, Nika hopes to offer office hours at the Sanc'chree for those in need. If you feel yourself or others in crisis, feel free to text 741741 or visit

Book Reviews In The News

This week's review (to be posted today) is of Ceejay Writer's The Flight to Brassbright. The review will be posted as soon as my pal Posey the Porpoise squeezes enough ink from the eels down here. Eels give ink, don't they?

Or is that a seacow? No.

Seacows give milk, I think. The sea is so full of mys'tree!

Letters From My Mailbox

Dear Nika:

Did you hear the one about the oyster forced to speak in public?

Signed,

Water-Guy

Dear Water-Guy,

I heard he hated it because he would get nervous and always clam up – which he hated because he was an oyster – not a clam. I have heard that joke so many times by now. I tell you, dolphin humor ... Speaking of ... why should one always be wary of the sea? Because no matter where you are ... something always smells fishy.

I don't get that one either.

Most Sincere I Remain,

Nika

News To Me

New Business Debuts

Travelers of New Babbage opened up in New Babbage. You may find this site by choosing site/store from this news letter's menu. The club will be a place for stories to be had – and friendship. Questions? Send a note to Philip or Edda Under Wood. Thank you! ~ fin.
